

JANET LINDNER (GROVER)

As the Yale University's Vice President for Human Resources & Administration, Janet is responsible for talent recruitment and development, benefits and compensation, organizational development, communications, change management, diversity and inclusion, labor relations and employee relations. She is a member of Yale's fiduciary committee on pensions and serves on a variety of university-wide committees. In addition to her HR portfolio, Janet oversees a range of administrative and operational areas, including police, emergency management, travel, parking, transit, printing & publishing, and support services.

Prior to Yale, Janet was Chief Administrative Officer for the City of New Haven, where she learned how to manage well in chaos and also how to lead snow removal operations—both good life skills. Before that, she worked in the Mayor's Office in New York City, on productivity, revenue and a host of other projects, including the City's labor-management partnership. She began her career as a union organizer and business agent for a local of SEIU and also worked for the president of NYC's hotel-motel council.
